Hesitant—yes, just a little. This is the Freshman on his registration day at Kutztown State Teachers College. As he makes his way from course to course and year to year, the individual casts aside his timidity and gains the poise and polish that makes a teacher. Kutztown trains the student in many ways. Through his courses he becomes aware of the world about him and decides in just what way he will fit into it. He becomes confident in his knowledge of subject matter and in his abilities to convey it to others. His education at Kutztown State Teachers College does much toward making him a well-rounded personality.

Just as her students are not standing still in the rushing stream of education, so Kutztown is progressing to meet the ever mounting demands of the world today.

A master plan has now been designed and approved which shows the long range developments to be made on the campus. Plans have now been approved for a new art building which will be named for Mr. Henry W. Sharadin, '91, who was formerly Director of Art Education at Kutztown. A men's dormitory also has been planned. In the discussion stages are a science building and a women's dormitory.

Kutztown is also looking forward to aiding students in the improvement of their study habits when the present study clinic is expanded. A reading clinic is also being developed which will prepare both undergraduates and teachers in-service to teach reading more effectively in the public schools.

Kutztown is molding her students, but she is developing right along with them in order to keep up with their needs and the needs of the educational world of today and the days to come.

President Rohrbach

Like many people, beginning teachers philosophize little about the profession which they have had the good fortune to enter. They engage in highly agreeable work and are paid for doing precisely the service which they render. They occupy positions of some prestige in the communities in which they live. Many of them carry heavier burdens than they ought to carry if their intellectual growth is to be assured. They have little time for meditation and reflection but enjoy a certain freedom from routine that is immensely satisfying. Their life is lived in an atmosphere free from external constraints in contrast to the administrator who must make significant day-to-day decisions on which the destiny of many persons depends.

It is no wonder, therefore, that teachers do not ask themselves, as often as they might, the central questions as to just what they intend to accomplish. More specifically, how are teachers to view their function as teachers and how can that function be made most effective.

In many schools the emphasis today is on the student's learning what he is taught. It fits in well with textbooks, scheduled classes, quizzes, final examinations, and other routines. Does this approach produce the best motivation for self-education beyond commencement? Does it accelerate or retard the educational maturity of the learner? Does the teacher provide only busy work which is educationally unproductive?

If the focus were shifted increasingly from teaching to learning in the elementary school, the secondary school and the college, students would be able to learn more and more without being taught. Then, indeed, the only education worthy of the name would become self-education.

Learners, in such a scheme of education, would spend more time preparing for discussions with their teachers and less time reciting assignments. Libraries, laboratories and studios would become more important to all learners. Study, an activity almost unheard of or unknown, in some places, would become a very respectable activity of the student. The significant questions now faced by the learner could be: What are the facts? What purpose do these facts serve? What do I think? These questions would replace two very common questions which now confront learners: What does the textbook contain? What does the teacher expect me to know and to say? Such questions may and probably will prompt a beginning teacher to philosophize about the teaching profession.

The trustees and the faculty join me in congratulating you as you enter a truly challenging career.

QUINCY A. W. ROHRBACH '12

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF
In the background—Sarah R. Keim, Stenographer.

The General Alumni Association congratulates each member of the 1958 class upon graduation from this college. You are now prepared for one of the most challenging professions in the world. Teaching, with its high ideals and purposes, offers opportunities to mould the thinking of a community and to direct the destiny of man.

In a short time you will become established in a community in which you may become a leader in many ways. The problems of American education starts in local communities in which you will serve. How do you want these children to grow up? Mass-taught because there is not sufficient classroom space for them? Indifferently-taught because the teaching profession may fail to hold outstanding people? Half-taught and prepared only for mediocrity because no one encouraged them to stay in school? The teacher who can inform, guide, and inspire these young minds in his community builds the civilization of tomorrow.

Few occupations and professions carry greater responsibility than that of teaching. The mature teacher has a deep and strong faith of the worth of the teacher, not only for individual children, but also for society itself. He recognizes his greatest opportunity to be instrumental in the growth and development of the child. Instructing, training, inspiring, and guiding the child, improving himself, serving the community, and interpreting the school's needs to parents are basic needs for a mature teacher. A teacher who lives a life that sets no precepts of character to students can teach nothing but shame. Be a teacher wherever you are. The ideals, attitudes, concepts, human understanding, and values you plant in a human mind will live eternally.

Reappraisals are taking place today in every form of human endeavor. A spotlight has been turned on American education. Scientific education is not the only need of America today. American democracy rests on wise citizen participation in public affairs and the guarantee of respect for the dignity of each human being. This demands an education where every child can rise to his own best potential capacity and interest. The chief function of the teacher is to open these doors for children by which they are permitted to enter exciting areas of experiences in their search for truth and skills.

Good teaching is always inspired teaching. The teacher for whom both his subject matter, as well as his students, are routine will never stimulate any student. A personal interest in these growing minds is essential. Services must be freely given whether pupils or the community make the demand. Great teachers are found at some time in every school; when they linger long enough and when there are enough of these, the community becomes great. The higher the standards of the teacher, the greater will be the importance attached to education and the greater the satisfaction to all. But that is not all—the world will be richer.

Teaching as a profession is as important to the individual as it is to the world. In what better way can a person with a fine mind, an interest in people, and a desire for the opportunity to grow within himself make his contribution to the world? How firm a foundation will you build in the future as you leave this your Alma Mater? May you light many candles that will shine back to cheer you. May you strive to conquer the evil powers which are the enemies of youth. May you encourage the eager and steady the unstable. May you share with youth the best treasures of your mind.

With every good wish for a bright, happy, and adventuresome future in the teaching profession, I remain—

Sincerely yours,
General Alumni Association

Faculty

From the moment classes begin for the Freshman to the time he is handed his diploma, the KSTC student is in contact with the faculty. Whether it is a question of the clarification of an assignment or of a conference on his progress in the subject, the student finds his professors always ready to lend a helping hand. Though faculty members retire and new ones arrive, this same helpfulness and friendly atmosphere prevails.

Not only does the professor meet and help students in the classroom but in the extra-curricular hours as well. The faculty sponsors campus clubs and activities. Even on week-ends helpful faculty members are on hand to guide students as they check in and out of the Personnel Office and pause briefly in the Concourse.

When the student looks back on his college career, he will recognize the fact that his advancement and final graduation would have been impossible without the sympathetic cooperation of the faculty.

Seated: Dr. C. Beekey, B.S., M.S., Ph.D.; Miss M. Rickenbach, B.S., M.A. Standing: Mr. J. White, B.S., Ed.M.

Deans

All the students at KSTC come in contact with the deans at some time during their college career. This occurrs because the duties of the Dean of Instruction and the Deans of Personnel are such that they deal with problems concerning all students who attend Kutztown.

Dr. Cyrus E. Beekey, Dean of Instruction, gives academic guidance. If students have difficulties in choosing courses, he will advise and suggest a solution. As Dean, Dr. Beekey also acts as College Registrar and is Dean of the Faculty, serving as administrative officer of that group.

Miss Mary E. Rickenbach, Dean of Women, and Mr. John B. White, Dean of Men, solve the social problems KSTC students may run into on the path to a degree. These problems range from housing and feeding the students to where they should park their cars. In fulfilling their duties, the Deans of Personnel display a wide area of knowledge and understanding of college students and their problems.

Mr. White came to the Kutztown campus from Muhlenberg Township High School to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Dr. William Liggitt.

Honors courses

Juniors and seniors with cumulative quality averages of 2.25 or better are eligible to take honors courses. These courses are taken by the student on his own time, using an outline of the course, a list of course projects, the basic texts, and other books. The student meets with the professor from the department which is giving the course. There is a comprehensive examination given at the termination of the course which is usually at the end of the semester in which the course is taken.

The first semester of this year four seniors took advantage of these courses. William R. Lewis took Advanced Oil and Watercolor and Harmony. Jessie F. Matthews studied the Development of the French Novel. Both James E. Spangler and Matthew J. Spence took the Ornithology course. During the second semester, Francis L. Chupick took Photography and Christine G. Feller studied The Novel. Pre-Shakespearean Literature and the History of England were the Honors Courses studied by Robert J. Gangewere.

These courses give the student a new slant on education. They offer him a chance to test his powers in advanced study and research and give him the satisfaction of pursuing individual study under private tutelage. Congratulations to these students for their very real achievements.

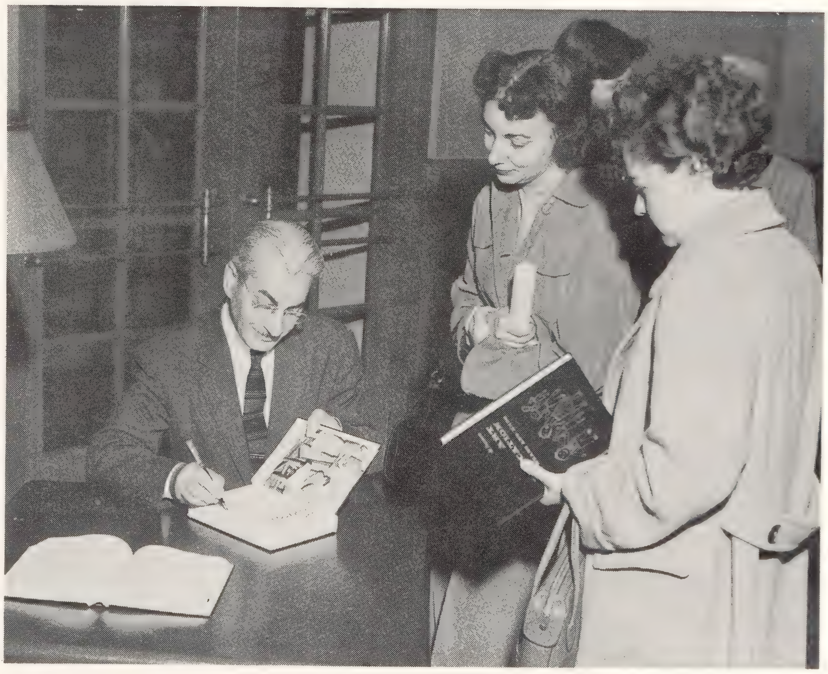
Art faculty

From the students' work in the concourse to the display room in the Sharadin Studio, the influence of the art department pervades the entire college.

Under the direction of Dr. Italo de Francesco this faculty group instills the practical and aesthetic qualities of art into all students from the basic course, Introduction to Art, required of all students, to the specialized courses such as Pictorial Expression, intended for majors in art.

Through the jury system, an art students' grade is based on an aggregate opinion of many experienced instructors rather than on that of an individual.

Dr. Heilman's redwood and chartreuse house, Dr. "D's" book, and Mr. Sawyer's "ideas" will become an integral part of the future art teachers.



Dr. deFrancesco autographs his latest book.

Library science faculty

Does this book belong under the classification number 973.918 or 973.92? . . . . what does Shore's say about that reference book? . . . . now the Gaylord book mending manual says that a loose page is never put back into a book with tape . . . . this is a good book, but is it recommended in the Standard Catalog for High School Libraries? These few muddled thoughts probably sound pretty strange, but these or facsimilies of them probably run through the head of each library science student at least once during his four years at K.S.T.C.

The instigators of these thoughts and the guiding lights of the future librarians are the members of the Library Science Faculty. They try in many ways to instill in the students knowledge of library administration and technical processes. This year Mr. Nicholas G. Stevens, Director of Library Education, developed proposed changes to the Library Science Curriculum. Along with teaching classes the staff also runs the college library. A new member was added to the college library and teaching staff this year with the retirement of Mrs. Mary Ellen Lewis. As Mrs. Ruth K. Yost succeeded Mrs. Lewis as head librarian, Mrs. Sara Mack filled the post of assistant librarian left vacant by Mrs. Yost.

The six members of the Library Science staff joined with twenty-two of their students and were initiated into Rho Chapter of Alpha Beta Alpha, national library fraternity.

A K.S.T.C. library publication is also interesting many educators in the elementary library movement. The Elementary School Library: A Basic Beginning, with its suggestions for organizing an elementary school library has already been obtained by interested parties in the forty-eight states, Alaska, and Hawaii.

Social studies faculty

An expansion in the field of electives has been inaugurated this past year by the Social Studies Department in conjunction with its raising of the credit requirements for majors in the field from thirty to thirty-six. In addition a new course in Industrial Relations was offered by Dr. Gresh.

In its new and larger office, the department works strenuously to implement its objective of equipping students to make an intelligent approach to public affairs, to equip graduates not only as teachers but as citizens of the world's largest democracy in this unstable world.

Seated: Dr. H. P. Prentiss, A.B., M.A., Ph.D., Dr. L. A. Graver, B.S., M.A., Ed.D.

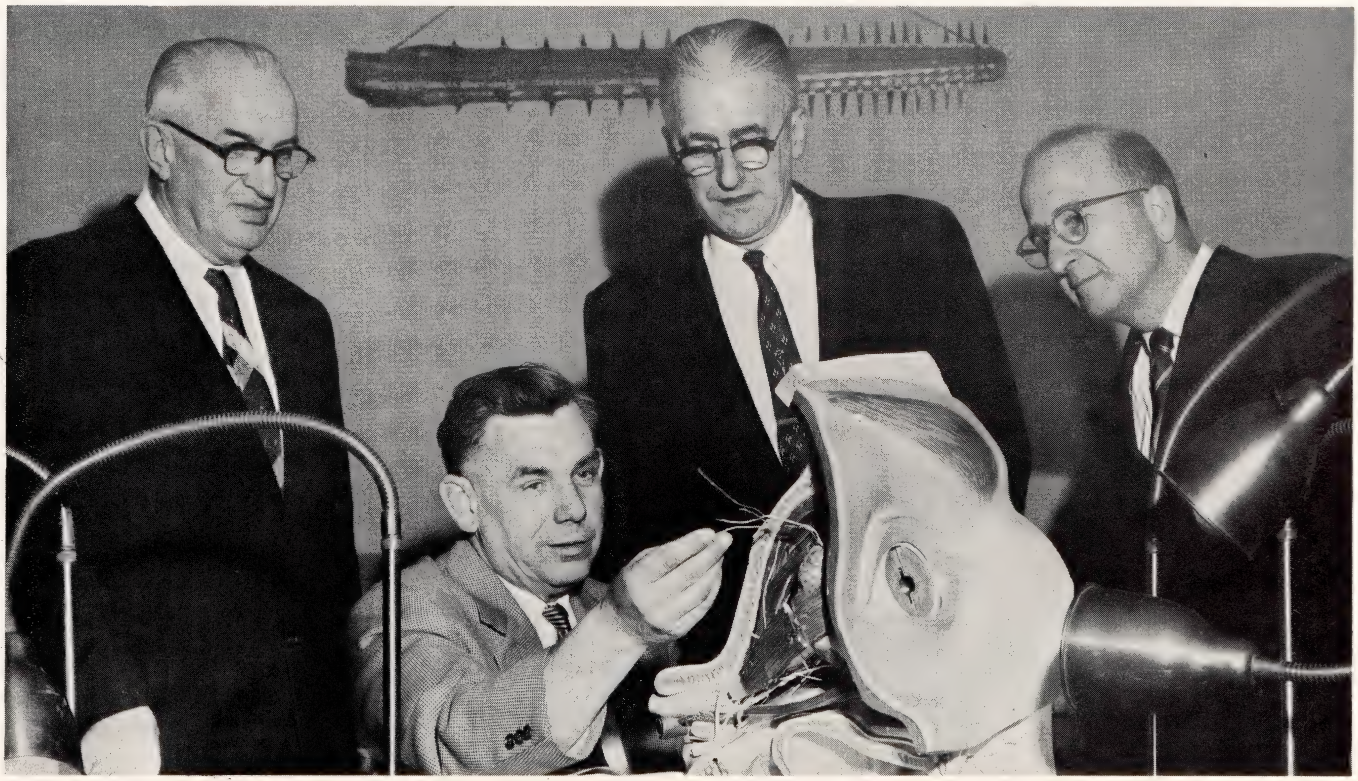
Science faculty

It has been the aim of Dr. William A. Green and the members of his Science faculty group to prepare competent science teachers to take places in the classrooms of a nation suddenly very much aware of its growing need for alert, trained scientists. The department urges upon its students the need to keep abreast of the constant changes and advances in their areas of specialization, and the need to incorporate those new findings in their classes.

With the pleasing prospect of a new and separate science building high on the agenda of additions to the campus, the department looks forward hopefully to a future in which KSTC science graduates in increasing numbers will be vitally serving our national welfare and security on the classroom front.

SCIENCE FACULTY—Mr. H. Schlenker, B.S., M.A.; Dr. W. Green, B.S., M.S., Ph.D.; Mr. R. Hamme, B.S., M.A.; Mr. A. Sharpe, B.S., M.S.



Mr. J. Patton, A.B., M.Ed.; Mr. W. Risley, B.S., M.A.; Miss R. Glassford, B.S., M.S.; Miss E. Pletsch, B.S., M.S.

Physical education faculty

A healthy body is a gift beyond compare and the members of the Physical Education faculty help us to preserve that gift. They accomplish this feat through gym, health, hygiene, first aid, and swimming courses.

Sportsmanship in all its phases is stressed in all the physical education classes, because being able to give and take with good grace is all-important in the teaching profession.

With the retirement of Miss Eva Pletsch at the end of this school year, the classic side of the physical education department lost a firm backer.

Mr. G. Joseph Musso substituted the second semester for Mr. Joseph Patton who was on a leave of absence to do further study.

Mathematics faculty

MATHEMATICS FACULTY: J. White, B.S., M.S.; P. Knedler, A.B., M.A.

The mathematics department of KSTC doubled its faculty this year, with the appointment of Jason W. White. He and Mr. Paul A. Knedler, head of the department, share the teaching duties of the department.

The addition of another staff member made it possible to offer Calculus III this year, for the first time at Kutztown. Before this, Mr. Knedler's teaching load was too heavy to permit him to teach this course.

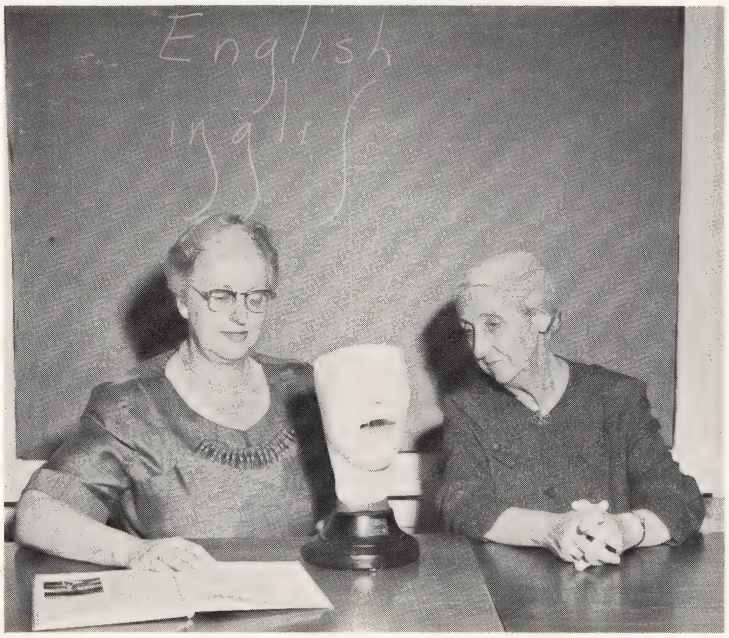
The math curriculum, which consists of such courses as Advanced College Algebra, Analytic and Synthetic Geometry, and Statistics presents a challenge to those who plan to major in mathematics. The curriculum in math is difficult but provides the students with a well-rounded background which enables them to enter the teaching field with confidence.

ENGLISH. Mrs. A. Shaefer, A.B., B.S., M.A.; Mr. R. Ford, Jr., A.B., M.A.; Dr. C. Yetman, B.A., M.A., Ph.D.; Dr. Tyson, A.B., A.M., Ph.D.; Mr. E. Foust, B.S., M.A.; Mr. K. Gable, B.S., M.A.

With a new addition to its staff, Dr. C. Duncan Yetman, and with new office and instructional equipment, the department, under the first full year of the leadership of Dr. A. Mervin Tyson, feels that it has moved closer to the fulfillment of its ideals.

Those goals are the preparation of students to take their places as literate and linguistically informed teachers and citizens who shall have acquired some competence in literary and aesthetic judgement. In working toward these objectives the department has made wide and successful use of individual conferences with the students—conferences to which students are encouraged to bring their problems and aspirations as they relate to literature and communication.

Speech and language faculty



Miss R. Bonner, A.B., M.A., A.M.; Dr. G. Hesse, A.B., M.A., Ph.D.

After a few years during which speech courses were not offered, speech courses are now a part of the schedule of each semester. This college does not offer a major in speech, but a student can now take speech as a second field with eighteen hours of work. The required courses, besides the four hours obtained as part of Communication, include Phonetics and Voice, Oral Interpretation, Play Production, and the Speech Program in the Secondary Schools. These courses are now offered in rotation. Speech electives include Debate, Discussion, and Parliamentary Procedure, Creative Dramatics, Speech Problems, and Speech Improvement.

The Language Department which is now separate from the speech department taught both beginning and advanced courses in Spanish and French this semester. It also carried on the language program in the elementary laboratory school. Under the supervision of Dr. Grace Hesse, advanced student in Spanish assist in teaching both written and oral Spanish in all grades of the laboratory school.

Music faculty

The music department deals with two phases of music, which are appreciation of music as an art and instruction in the teaching of it. The course, Introduction to Music, gives all the students a basic background in the many phases of music as it will be found in the teaching field.

Elementary students who don't pass a Standardized Achievement Test in music must take Preparatory Music. This course forms a background for the more specialized music courses they must take. The elementary students learn the various methods and devices used to teach music on the elementary level. Some of the courses which aid them are Class Piano, Music for the Elementary Grades, and Teaching Music in the Elementary Grades.

Probably the most noted activities of the music department are the two concerts given each year. The Christmas and Spring Concerts represent much work on the part of the directors of the choir and orchestra.

Mrs. Mary S. Lovell has substituted for Mr. Roy C. Thomas, who is on a leave of absence to do further study.

Dr. H. Casselbury, B.S., Ed.M., Ed.D.; Mr. R. Thomas, B.S., Ed.M.; (Insert) Mrs. Lovell, B.S.

Mr. M. A. Slick, B.A., M.S.; Dr. C. J. Moyer, B.Ed., M.S., Ph.D.

Geography faculty

Of primary concern to the Geography Department is the orientation of students in a rapidly changing world. That future teachers should acquire a satisfactory grounding not only in the physical world of wind, sand, and stars, but in the political world of constantly shifting boundaries and allegiances seems axiomatic to Dr. Josephine Moyer and Mr. Max H. Slick.

This year the department acquired a hygrothermograph, an instrument for the measurement and recording of temperatures and relative humidity. The new acquisition is housed in the weather box atop the Library roof.

In conjunction with the Social Studies Department a field trip was offered for the first time—a trip for the inspection of Williamsburg, Virginia, and its environs.

Through course work and related activities students obtain invaluable background material giving another dimension to their knowledge of historical and literary events.

The Department of Education is concerned with acquainting students with the aims of education in a democracy and with the organization which has developed to achieve these purposes. It also seeks to orient prospective teachers to the ideals and practices of the profession of teaching and to develop in them the skills needed in organizing, selecting, and adapting curriculum materials to the end that effective learning situations may prevail. Opportunity is offered college students to observe good situations through school visitation, to participate in student-teaching, and to bring their problems to practicums where solutions may be suggested.

An innovation to be made in the department will come with a special education building to be erected adjacent to the campus laboratory school. Activity in this building will be concerned with the treating of four special types of children—the physically handicapped, the hard of hearing, the speech defectives, and the mentally retarded.

There will be a classroom set aside in the building for students in the elementary curriculum who are interested in special education work. Part of the purpose of this building is the preparation of special education teachers in the public school.

The addition of this building to the campus will mean a new field for the curriculum and greater help for these unfortunate children.

Laboratory school faculty

The Laboratory school faculty is a group of carefully selected teachers who are especially qualified to teach elementary school children as well as to work with college students. Added to the staff this year was Mrs. Adalyn Van Gilder, associate professor and teaching supervisor for Grade One of the lab school. Mrs. Van Gilder assumed her duties in September of the 1957-58 school year.

In the lab school classroom, college students may observe teachers and pupils at work. These observations help to make more meaningful the ideas that are discussed in the college classroom.

The laboratory school faculty is always ready to discuss problems or to offer suggestions to inquiring future teachers. The aid they give student teachers is invaluable as the faculty strives to help make Kutztown students of today the leaders of tomorrrow.

Classes

In the spring of the year, the seniors take the spotlight. What does it take to become a senior? What is the underclass student like? What are his struggles, his problems, his life and his activities?

As the student enters KSTC, he tries to display a high school sophistication, but behind his maroon and gold dink and Key, a certain amount of restraint and tenseness can be seen.

When the next level of challenge arrives—the sophomore year—the student feels ready to study, learn, and participate at KSTC. This year there is not that problem of the unfamiliar faces of upperclassmen—just those poor frosh. Wait till they get to customs jury! This year he may gain a role in the all-college revue or join the newspaper staff—confidence is mounting.

Junior year arrives with the academic work which he has met before, but he also finds himself swept along with the tide of junior responsibilities and honors. Maybe he's chairman of a Homecoming float or the Junior Prom. Perhaps he'll be elected to Kappa Delta Pi. Then class rings arrive. Now he's ready. There is that nervousness again, though. Next year he'll be student teaching—will he be ready? Yes, he's ready! There's a determination within that wasn't there three years ago. The future can come. He's ready for it now.

With a handbook as his Bible and a dink as his trademark, the KSTC Freshman began his college life in a state of almost complete bewilderment. During the first weeks of the semester, he found himself amidst an entirely new way of living.

Scholastically and socially, the Freshman's challenge is difficult. Learning to live with total strangers and to fulfill academic demands, the Freshman must adjust himself to a new pattern. Through customs regulations, the annual picnic in Kutztown Park, the bonfire, the college dances, and the vain struggling tug-of-war to be "de-dinked", he began to find himself belonging to the college. Likewise, making acquaintances in the concourse or at a local soda fountain resulted in his becoming one of the group and with the Freshman class becoming united.

A formal organization occurred when the class met to elect officials. This year the members selected Clarence Yerger to serve as president, along with Ronald Browne as vice-president; Barbara Burns, secretary; and Dorothy Hieber, treasurer. From preparing a "Golden Avalanche" float for the Homecoming Parade to sponsoring the May Day dance, the Class of '61 worked in an organized manner.

But, as in the beginning of any new experience, all sorts of problems and frustrations occurred; and it was only the competent student who found his niche in college life and adjusted well to his environment. It is this student who now feels confident that he will be able to meet the next challenge—the Sophomore year.

They're an active crew—those sophomores! With Ronald Glass as class president, John Bishop, vice-president, (He filled in for six months as president while Ron served a hitch in the Army Reserve), Dorothy (Warr) Gay, secretary, and Reba Angstadt, treasurer, the class planned many successful activities.

The crown of Homecoming Queen again rested upon the head of a member of the class of '60, Dorothy (Warr) Gay. She was crowned by sophomore Marlene Nuss, last year's queen, and attended by Judy Hodes also a sophomore. Rounding out a big Homecoming Day, the sophomore float captured first prize in the parade. The float depicted the KSTC student Union Building as they see it!

"Lover's Leap," was the title of the Valentine Dance which is annually sponsored by the Sophomore class.

A snowy February 15, saw many dancing to the music of Henry Casella and his Showmen. Mid-way through the evening, Anthony Rising and Betsy Smaltz were crowned King and Queen of Hearts.

The class of 1960 has given much to KSTC in 1957-58 and now they are looking forward to an even bigger Junior year.

Next year's all college revue was planned and a superior production is in the beginning stages. To promote interest in gridiron activity, class members decorated the campus with maroon and gold crepe paper streamers for each home game. The Juniors were also responsible for the Friday night football pep rallies in the gym which promoted that "old Kutztown Spirit." Homecoming Day arrived and the Junior class float "Primping for the Dance" copped second prize in the parade.

Along with their social side, the Juniors were shown to be in the intellectual circle, too, when twenty-two of them qualified for election to Epsilon Zeta Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, National Honor Society in Education.

The Juniors really knew they were over the halfway point the day the class rings arrived.

The social high point of the year came on the evening of April 12—the Junior Prom. Upon entrance to the ancient garden atmosphere, favors of Angelique cologne were presented to each girl. It was really a "Roman Holiday" as couples danced to the music of Ken Keeley's Orchestra.

Under the leadership of the President, James Milne; Vice-President, Daniel Yakubecek; Secretary, Joan Zachar; and Treasurer, Marilyn Merkel, they progressed to the top plateau—Seniors.

JUNIOR CLASS MEN—First Row: D. Jones, O'Conner, J. Hippensteel, K. Kercher, M. McAloose, R. Ritrovato, R. Fulmer, C. Kramer, S. Puzzuito, R. Maurer, F. Nye, M. Demchik, R. Willi, S. Kolb, A. Activities

Activities at Kutztown this year have been numerous. As in other years, the evening performances offered a cultural note. Many versatile performers made these events lasting memories to the members of the audiences. The afternoon assemblies also brought many interesting speakers and other creative artists.

The annual Homecoming festivities helped the new students and refreshed the upper-classmen and alumni in the meaning and traditions of KSTC. Many of the students were active in the colorful all-college review presented on Homecoming evening.

The Art Conference gave the art students the opportunity to meet art personalities and gain many facts pertaining to the art world.

Dinners and dances rounded out a busy KSTC year.

Student activity board

L. Hutchinson congratulates E. Battan as the sophs float wins Homecoming prize.

President Earl McLane, Vice-President Frank Nye, Secretary Josephine Zondlo, and Treasurer Art Castellucci are the executives of this year's Activities Board, the speaking voice for the entire student body. The group is made up of four members from each class. They meet to discuss the problems of the students and plan campus activities that everyone may enjoy.

The Activities Board grew out of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association groups which were prominent on campus at one time, but which had not the great responsibilities that the present Activities Board has.

This year the Board planned a full, exciting Homecoming Day program, as well as a number of teas, and the annual Christmas Dance.

The Board collects a fifteen dollar fee from each student, and from this money a budget is formulated to cover the expenses of a number of student activities. The preparation of this budget is perhaps the most important function of the Board throughout the year because without this money many campus activities would not be able to continue.

This year these hard working Activity Board members have been the motivating force to add to the comfort and enjoyment of the KSTC students.

Art conference

The theme for the 19th Annual Art Education Conference was "Effective Communication Through Art." The KSTC campus was the scene of the conference on October 25-26.

One of the highlights of the conference was the dinner on Friday evening at which Dr. Raymond Stites spoke on the topic, "Great Ideas as Communicated by Great Art." At the conference luncheon Saturday noon, Miss Mary Adeline McKibbin spoke on the topic, "Experimental Work in Television and in Enrichment of the Arts for the Mentally Gifted."

The conference visitors gained much useful information from the films, demonstrations by KSTC art students, the exhibits in the Sharadin Studio, and the displays of art products in the gymnasium.

M. Nuss crowns D. W. Gay "Queen for a Day"!

Homecoming

Homecoming Day—November 16, 1957—brought many alumni back to the campus to renew memories and friendships.

The queen of this year's festivities was Dorothy (Warr) Gay, a sophomore elementary major who was crowned by last year's queen, Marlene Nuss, also a sophomore in elementary education. The attendants were Mary Ann Schlegel, a freshman, and Judy Hodes, another sophomore.

The alumni were taken on guided tours of the campus; then, along with students, assembled in the Georgian Dining Room for a banquet. Pre-football game festivities centered around the annual parade of class floats and the crowning of the queen. The winning float of the colorful parade this year was constructed by the sophomore class. Their theme was—"The Student Union Building." The junior class float—"Primping for the Dance"—followed a close second.

The K.S.T.C. Golden Avalanche then marched on to the field and held the East Stroudsburg S.T.C. Warriors to a 14-14 tie. After the game a tea in the gymnasium brought the afternoon events to a close.

That evening many alumni, students, and guests filled Schaeffer Auditorium to enjoy "Good News," a musical comedy of the twenties, which was the all-college revue.

Refreshments and dancing in the gym to the music of the Showmen brought Homecoming Day to a close.

Three pretty smiles reflect the Homecoming Day celebration mood. The reigning beauties are J. Hodes, D. Gay, and M. Schlegel.

All-college revue

Flappers hit the KSTC campus last fall as one of the methods of advertising the all-college revue production of the Lawrence Schwab and B. G. De Sylva musical "Good News."

The plot of this play of the 1920's with a small co-educational college as its background concerns the trials and tribulations of the football hero portrayed by Reed Maurer. These difficulties are both scholastic and romantic. Rounding out the eternal love triangle were Christine Drumheller and Colette La Vanture. Major supporting rolls were filled by La Rue Hahn, Roy Miller, and Oscar Shupp. Other members of the "college gang" were Hank Adams, Francis Chupich, William Lewis, Jack Moyer, William Reilly, Donald Gorman, Janet McGuire, Lois Hutchinson, Geoffrey Piece, Gene Kershner, Donald Steffy and Edward McDonald. The dancers and singers rounded out a spirited cast which delighted the audiences who saw the production on Nov. 15 and Nov. 16, Homecoming evening.

This gay college musical could not have been possible without the aid of directors Bernard Schimmel and Clarence Reinert and faculty co-ordinator Mr. E. Earnest Foust of the college English department. Many people, such as Mr. Harold C. Mantz and his Theatre Arts class who designed the set, the make-up committee, the orchestra, the props committee and many many others went to make this all-college revue really "Good News."

Diners enjoy Thanksgiving "Turkey and Trimmins."

Thanksgiving dinner and dance

The annual Thanksgiving dinner and dance took place on Saturday, November 23, this year. The turkey dinner which preceded the dance was enjoyed in the Georgian Dining Room where candlelight and gay centerpieces on the tables set the mood for the dance.

Sponsored by the Resident Men's Association the dance had Football as its theme. The gym was decorated as a football field with goal posts and all the things which go to make a good football game.

Music for the occasion was provided by Wally Spotts' ten piece orchestra. One of the highlights of the evening was the crowning of "Mr. Esquire". This year Arthur Castellucci, a senior Library Science and geography major, won the award.

Assemblies

Bloomsburg STC students explain method of speech correction.

The assembly program at KSTC is an activity to which both students and faculty look forward.

Early in the year Dr. Quincy A. W. Rohrbach called a special assembly at which Dr. Charles H. Boehm, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, the presidents of the other thirteen state teachers colleges, and other state education dignitaries were introduced.

Students from the Bloomsburg STC special education department were welcomed on the campus as they presented an enlightening program on their major field. Jean Erdman, Creative Dance artist, presented a very modern display of the modern dance.

As the year progressed into winter, an explorer of the Far North, Admiral Donald MacMillan, educated and entertained an assembly audience with his travel experiences and also showed his own travel film Greenland and the Far North.

Continuing the year with music, the students and faculty were treated to the spirited singing of The Continental-aires. Laurel Hurley, a soprano at the Metropolitan Opera, displayed her beautiful voice in a delightfully melodic program. Miss Hurley, a native of Allentown, added a local note of interest to the assembly.

The year's assembly programs were closed with an Art Program by Eugene Jemison, Muralist and Printmaker, part of the college Cultural Festival.

The Continentalaires serenade the assembly audience with a gay spiritual.

Each year Shaeffer auditorium is host to a high caliber of cultural talent and this past year of evening performances has not left the audiences wanting for variety or talent.

The first performance this year was announced as Carroll Glenn, violinist, and Eugene List, pianist. Miss Glenn, who is in private life Mrs. Eugene List, brought the regrets of her husband on the evening of the performance since he had sprained his arm and was unable to appear. Miss Glenn also brought a gentleman who filled in very ably for the evening. He was pianist Stanley Babbit. Both pianist and violinist gave an enjoyable performance.

The KSTC audience was again favored by a visit from the Dublin Players who presented the G. B. Shaw comedy, Arms and the Man. The Manhattan Concert Orchestra provided another high point in the college cultural year. Their inspired performance of the "Siegfried Idyll" by Wagner brought many favorable comments from the audience. The evening performances concluded with the college Cultural Festival Production of The Tempest by Shakespeare.

Men's open house

December 9 was the date—the date for a very pleasant visit. That was the visit of the ladies to the Men's Dormitory. This is an annual event which is enjoyed by the students of the college. The men worked toward the evening by devising many artistic arrangements for their rooms as well as performing a mop and dust-cloth routine on these abodes.

The evening arrived with all the preparations made—rooms spotless and shining. As the guests progressed through the dormitory, they found many signs of male ingenuity. In fact, one room displayed a set of weight-lifting equipment. Another room had an Oriental decor heightened by Oriental music from the phonograph. A ceiling-high lamo and various plants decorated another room. To round out the visit, upon each floor refreshments were served, egg nog, cookies, or punch.

A fitting ending came to this gay evening as the ladies and gentlemen of KSTC descended to the concourse and sang Christmas carols.

Art bazaar

For days before the Art Bazaar, the members of the Art Alliance and Art Education groups were busy making napkins, table decorations, aprons, and scarves. The array of gifts put on sale at the opening of the bazaar, on December 3, was varied and colorful.

The line started forming half an hour early and even Dr. de Francesco couldn't get in the door until time for the sale to start. The order of the day was first come, first served. Many students had made their choices ahead of time when they saw the articles being made in the dorms. Sales were made as fast as the girls could take the money.

Cries of "Look here" and "Oh, I like that!" were heard on all sides. Those who came late were disappointed as their choices were already gone. In a very few minutes all the articles were sold and the students were on their way to the dorms to gloat over their purchases.

Setting the Christmas spirit early, students attend the annual dinner.

Dining with the cheerful atmosphere set forth by the gayly lit Christmas tree, the students enjoy their dinner.

Christmas dinner and dance

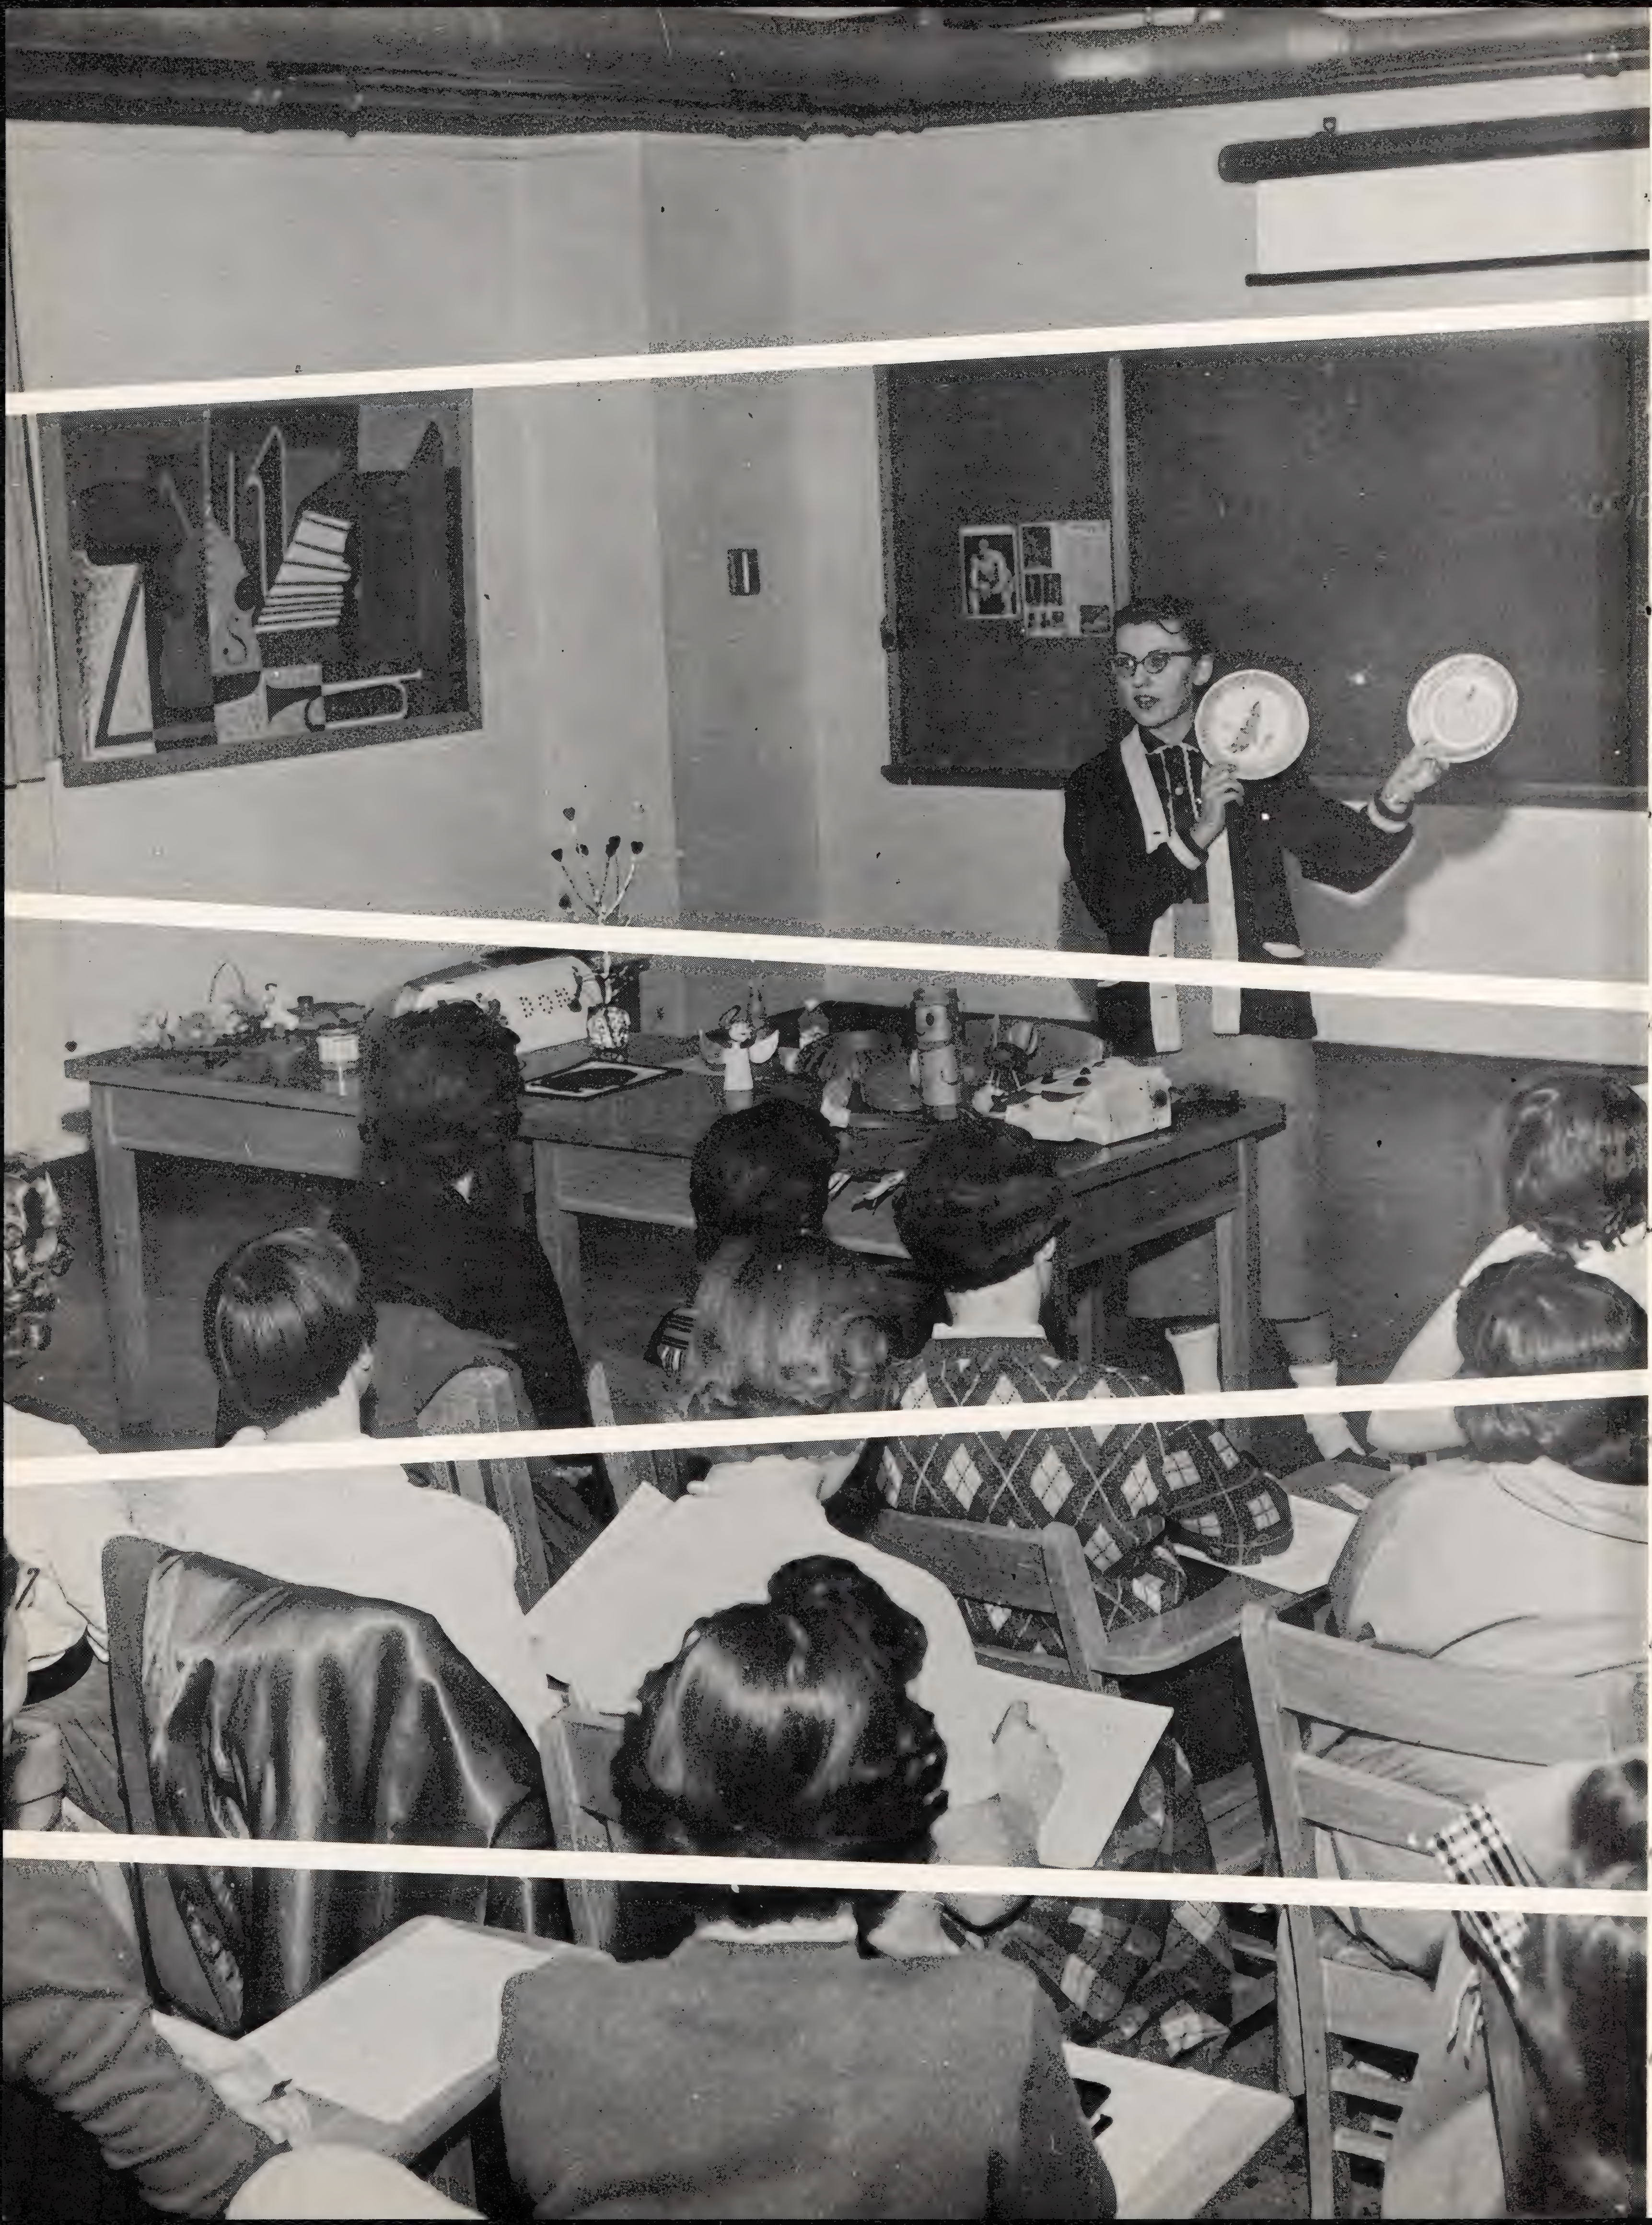
The annual Christmas dinner was enjoyed on Saturday evening, December 7. The delicious turkey dinner was served in the Georgian Dining Room. The Collegeiannaires provided several holiday numbers at the conclusion of the dinner.

After the dinner the students were treated to a Kule Yule in the gymnasium where contemporary decorations provided the topic of conversation at the dance. The gymnasium was decorated in a contemporary motif using modern backgrounds. Music was provided by Matt Gillespie and his orchestra.

The dance committee deserves credit for the hard work they did to provide a successful dance. The committee consisted of Pete Nye, general chairman; Carol Ostrom, publicity; Lois Hutchinson, programs; Judy Derr, tickets; Vicki Owens, refreshments; and Pete Nye and Carol Ostrom, decorations.

Matt Gillespe provided the music for Cool Yule dancers.

Go, man, go—



Clubs

Busy—yes, KSTC students are busy, and it's not always with class work and projects. No matter in what channel of interest the student finds himself there is a campus club in which he may develop this interest. Perhaps he desires to cultivate a new avocation; he may do this too, for these clubs are always inviting beginners as well as old-timers to join them.

Clubs have been formed for the student's development in his major field. An Education Club and a scholastic honor fraternity have been instituted to create in him a more professional approach to his chosen career.

The Kutztown student may find a chance to speak for his fellow students by participating in the student government organizations on campus. He may also realize his interest in national government and its working by belonging to those clubs on campus which pertain to our current world.

A student may find his creative desires supplied by the drama, creative dance, music, and hobby groups on campus.

The KSTC student has the opportunity to meet with his fellow students and find himself an enriching diversion through the extra-curricular program on campus.

Pottery making seems simple under the deft hands of J. Crumb, '39

The Art Education Society is a group of junior and senior art students under the leadership of William Lewis, president; Ted Kramer, vice-president, Winifred Samuels, secretary, and Earl McLane, treasurer. The society is one of enrichment brought about by speakers and projects of an educational nature.

This year, as before, Art Ed sponsored the Beaux Arts Ball and cooperated with the Art Alliance in staging the Art Bazaar, the Art Dinner, and a college tea. The group is now working on a research project aimed at computing the cost of operating on art program in the junior high school.

In addition to membership in the A.E.S., many are also associate members of the Eastern Arts Association, a branch of the National Art Education Association. Through this associate membership, art students reap the benefits of the national art education magazines which give the late developments and experiences of professional people in the field.

Art alliance

"I've got a question for the panel."

Freshman and sophomore art majors attend Art Alliance meetings the third Monday of every month. The meetings help these students to gain a better appreciation of their chosen field by offering programs on various media of Art. Mr. Garrett Conover, Breinigsville, Pennsylvania, kicked off this year's list of speakers with a talk on composition and techniques in oil and water color. At other meetings there were discussions on pottery and a panel discussion on the question "What is Modern Art?"

The Art Bazaar is always a combined effort of the Art Alliance and the Art Education Society. The members of the Alliance contribute their time and energy to the making of objects to sell at the Bazaar.

The annual Christmas Art Dinner is also planned jointly by Art Education and Art Alliance groups. Besides exchanging gifts, the art students and faculty enjoyed the film, "The Twelve Days of Christmas."

With their adviser, Mr. Harold Mantz, the group was led this year by Kathleen Schmoyer, president; Carol Bruton, secretary; and Ruth Vonderhorst, treasurer.

Half-time salute to K-town.

Band

Band practice today at 3:30. Everyone please be present. Mr. Roy C. Thomas, director, posted this notice or facsimile on the bulletin board twice a week this fall. At 3:30 the music group met on the football field or in the auditorium to practice new music and routines for Saturday's game or Friday night's pep rally.

A specialty act was provided this year by Janet McGuire, a majorette from the Junior Class, and Lynn Motter, the sophomore Drum Major who entertained at games and pep rallies with thrilling displays of fire baton twirling.

The Maroon and Gold marching band presented a show during the half-time of the KSTC-Cheyney STC game at Cheyney. Some themes used by the group this year were the Circus and on Homecoming Day the drill Music Through the Ages was presented. Another marching activity was the participating in the Kutztown Hallowe'en Parade.

Heading the band this year was Fred Schearer as president, Robert Wolff was vice-president and Rosemarie Santee, secretary.

The band feels justifiably that it contributed color and spirit to the many college functions at which it appeared.

We won!

The orchestra practiced long hours for the Spring Concert.

Choir and orchestra

Desiring a diversion from the chores and tensions of academic studies, a group of students have found relaxation, fun, and entertainment in belonging to the choir and orchestra. As they attend rehearsals each week, they practice much, but also, they get to know other students.

Under the direction of Dr. Henry R. Casselberry of the choir and Mr. Roy C. Thomas of the orchestra the seventy-five choir members and the thirty orchestra members prepared for their two annual concerts, presented at Christmas time and in the spring during the college Cultural Festival. Mrs. Mary S. Lovell directed the orchestra during the Spring Concert in the absence of Mr. Thomas who was engaged in further study. During the year the choir members also sang at the Baccalaureate Service, while soloists from the choir participated at educational and other social dinners.

The Collegiannaires, a small segment of the choir, performed at the Christmas Dinner and at the Naturalization Court Ceremony on Citizenship Day at the Reading Courthouse. A string ensemble, composed of Janice Welker, piano; Kathleen Schmoyer, cello; and John Bryson, violin, played at various college functions.

The members of the choir and orchestra cooperate for the benefit of everyone and all gain the personal satisfaction of knowing, through appreciative audiences, that they have done their job well.

The officers of the choir are President, George Becker and Secretary, Audrey Kroll. The officers for the orchestra are President, John Bryson; Secretary, Dorothy Clauser; and Vice-President, Sam Pizzuto.

Practice makes perfect.

Contemporary affairs forum

The Contemporary Affairs Forum met monthly to discuss current national and international happenings. The meetings this year were also highlighted by guest speakers, films, filmstrips, and panel discussions. A look at the various topics chosen by the forum for careful consideration and discussion shows how world progress is important even to the college student. These topics include "The Effects of Sputnik upon World Affairs," "A Look at Germany Today," and "The Problems of the Near East." The members of the forum try to determine as many of the facts of a situation as possible, before attempting to discuss the problem.

Robert Barthlow and Steve Notaro, as co-chairmen, worked together with Secretary Ron Horvath, Treasurer Clarence Reinert, and the club adviser, Dr. Hervey P. Prentiss, to plan these meetings and to make them interesting and worthwhile.

Each member receives a weekly news review paper which enables him to keep well informed as to the political, social, and economic developments of the world. Through this and other facilities, the Forum helps to prepare students to speak and think intelligently on the affairs of the world.

Debate club

A. Cinceripino debates the issue.

The Debate Club has now completed its second year of activity on the Kutztown campus. The ofcers, President, Ray Klingler; Vice-President, Charles Keffer; Corresponding-Secretary, Bonita Knerr; and Recording Secretary, Susan Allport, helped to guide the club through the program for the year. They were ably aided by Mr. Gable, club adviser.

One of the projects was to improve the debating knowledge of the members. To reach this goal, members engaged in impromptu debates at each meeting. Priscilla Fabyan and Bonita Knerr were the monitors for the first such debate.

A schedule is being arranged for debates with neighboring colleges. The club has contacted both Albright and Muhlenberg Colleges to arrange debates on some national question of interest to both clubs. These experiences should be an aid toward the improvement of technique of debate procedures and preparation of briefs.

At final meeting the annual club picnic was held. All the members had a wonderful time. Games were played and supper was served. This event climaxed the year's activity on the spirit of learning while enjoying.

Concert dance

For the past six years Miss Eva Pletsch has put the Concert Dance Group through its paces in order that it might add a colorful spectacle to the cultural festival each spring.

This year as a culmination of her many years as adviser to the group, Miss Pletsch, who retired at the end of this year, led the group in a revue of some of the best and most interesting phases of the dance from the classical ballets to the modern interpretive dances. This revue covered the highlights of the concerts held during the past six years.

Because recitals of this group have given the students an appreciation of the dance and a realization that it is an expression of art, they will miss this delightful and colorful spectacle on future May Days.

This year's officers were Lois Hutchinson, president; Marietta Schaffer, secretary; and Emily Battan, treasurer.

Drama club

The meetings of the Drama Club are planned to give students being introduced to dramatics, a knowledge of happpenings behind the scenes of a production and an opportunity to display their own dramatic ability. Therefore, the club meetings entail such activities as discussions, stage make-up demonstrations, and presentations of plays. Presiding at these meetings is President, William Lewis, with Janice Dorland as secretary. The club advisers are Miss Ruth E. Bonner and Mr. E. Earnest Foust.

One of the most interesting meetings of the year was the occasion on which members presented three dramatic readings of one-act plays. Those presented were: Ile by Eugene O'Neil, Undertow by Anne Werhterly, and The Farewell Dinner by Arthur Schnitzler. Direction was by Bernard Schimmel and Jane Crum.

The major production, which all members and participants anticipated eagerly, was the spring production The Tempest, a Shakespearean play. The lead roles in the drama were portrayed by Roy Miller as Prospero, Jeanean Yakubecek as Miranda, and Christine Drumheller as Ariel. For several months the cast worked hard to make this a commendable performance.

The art of reading a play is demonstrated at a Drama Club meeting.

Williams.

This year the Fellowcrafters really got off to a "bang up" start with a demonstration by Miss Wible, the organization's adviser, on the wedging and modeling of clay. The non-art members of the club enjoyed this and the other demonstrations by art students on various phases of the arts and crafts. Of particular interest were the demonstrations on Christmas decorations, given by Carol Deets and Carol Bruton, and on puppets and their staging, given by Barbara Jefferies. These special meetings were chosen for the group by Mary Matthews and Virginia Blakely, members of the program committee.

During the rest of the meetings the amateur artists spent their time on their own private projects. These projects include an array of clay modeling, weaving, embroidering, water coloring, knitting, and paper sculpturing.

The Fellowcrafters will close this year with a special dinner for the members and speakers. This dinner will be arranged by the officers: President, Lorraine Buchecker; Vice-President, Joanne Fields; and Secretary, Irma King.

Geography club

"Around the world" with the Geography Club, under the capable leadership of Raymond Klingler, president; Art Castellucci, vice-president, and Frank Friedman, secretary-treasurer, the geography majors of KSTC learned much about this earth they live on and its inhabitants.

Perhaps the most notable activity of this year was the annual dinner in October, at which the "weather-forecasters" heard from a Lafayette College student, Abdul M. Aziz, who spoke of his native country, Afghanistan. Other activities included a talk, "The Grand Canyon," given by a student from Easton, Mrs. Beryl Miller, Another student, Arlan Kramer, displayed his coin collection for the benefit of all. Mr. Herbert J. Schlenker also presented a discussion on our Western states which included slides.

Service club

"We aim to please" might be the motto of the Service Club. The members of this group have been at their efficient best this year—handing out programs at afternoon assemblies and checking coats for the Art and In-service Teachers conferences, and for the Homecoming and Alumni Days. These ladies and gentlemen were present to usher faculty, students, and guests to their seats at evening performances, the Christmas Concert, the Spring Concert, and the Baccalaureate and Commencement Services.

Service Club isn't all work, though. This year the President, John Bishop; Vice-President, Edward Erdman; and Secretary, Barbara Gaul planned, with the other members of the club and the adviser, Mr. Amos Sharpe, the annual dinner which they enjoyed in November. The entertainment after the dinner was in the form of relay games.

The Club noted an innovation this year—more men. All of the interest being shown this club, which aids KSTC in such great measure, is certainly well deserved.

Two service club members do their duty as they distribute assembly programs.

After much hard work, Radio-TV group tape an original script.

Radio TV club

A person can never tell in which direction his talents lie. At KSTC students are given many opportunities to find an avocation.

A growing club which presents some of these opportunities is the Radio-TV Club, formerly known as Radio Forum. The officers, June Rogers, president; George Becker, vice-president; Edwin James, secretary-treasurer; and John Ferrence, publicity chairman; saw the growth of television and decided to reorganize the club in the fall to include this medium.

The group, advised by Dr. Grace Hesse, has discussions on radio and TV. A demonstration of TV make-up was also presented. Radio-TV Club had a most important day on February 22, when they toured WRCV-TV in Philadelphia.

Radio is still important today and this group proved it when they enacted an original radio script over WKAP in Allentown. June Rogers and George Becker wrote this original presentation on college life.

The members of this club have an eye to the future of our most important means of communication and all recognize that as teachers they will very probably have occasion to use these media in their classrooms.

Kappa Delta Pi

Election to Kappa Delta Pi represents one of the highest honors on campus. Local chapter Epsilon Zeta is but one of more than two hundred similar chapters throughout the United States. This honor society, originally established as the Illinois Education Club at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois, was reorganized March, 1911 and incorporated as Kappa Delta Pi. In 1932 the official title became Kappa Delta Pi, an Honor Society in Education. Epsilon Zeta Chapter was installed at KSTC, May 27, 1941, by the late Dr. William Bagley.

The chapter serves the college by promoting a scholarship aid program. Members volunteer to help fellow classmates who need assistance with study materials and procedures.

Highlights of the year included the annual Christmas dinner with Mr. Samuel Grundy of the Reading Museum as speaker, and the entertainment of the underclassmen on the dean's list.

Officers of the chapter were President Robert Gangewere, Vice-President Eva Lazorack, Secretary Dian Smoyer, Treasurer Carol Ostrom and Historian Julie Lauck. Counselors for the group are Miss Katherine D. Christ and Dr. Levi D. Gresh.

Elementary education club

Elementary Club officers discuss the next meeting with advisor, Miss S. Bellows.

Having the interests of its members in mind, the Elementary Club attempts to familiarize Elementary Education students with some of the problems and activities in the elementary school. Consequently, the monthly meetings take the form of panel discussions, workshops, and informal gatherings. Officers for the year were: President, Marjorie Rienecker; Vice-President, Frances Plevyak; Corresponding Secretary, Janet Oplinger; Recording Secretary, Virginia Blakely; Treasurer, Catherine Rieser. The adviser for the group is Miss Susie M. Bellows.

This year's activities were an introduction to A.C.E.I., Association for Childhood Educational International, a student teacher panel, making Christmas gifts for underprivileged children, learning folk dances and games, holiday activities, children's recordings, ways to interest gifted children, and a demonstration in teaching foreign languages in the elementary school.

As a branch of the A.C.E.I. the club provides facts and information concerning the new developments of the A.C.E.I. program.

Secondary education club

Since every year brings to the education world a growing concern for the quantity and quality of teachers in the secondary field, a club growing in importance and value is the Secondary Education Club. This group meets once a month to discuss problems, old and new, that a beginning teacher can expect to face.

The monthly programs are planned to be both interesting and helpful. During the past year several motion pictures were shown to the members. A student teacher panel highlighted one meeting, and another was concerned entirely with the problem of discipline in the secondary school. Annual features of the Secondary Education Club are the autumn banquet held in cooperation with the Elementary Education Club and the spring picnic.

Carl Arner is president of the club; Clyde Kauffman, vice-president; Marilyn Merkel, secretary; and Joan Zacher is treasurer. Dr. Robert Jacks is the adviser.

Freshmen collegiate customs committee

"Hey, Frosh, come here," is a familiar phrase on campus during September and October.

This year this demand was made by the newly formed Freshman Collegiate Customs Committee, which, despite its formal sounding name and austere appearance actually worked for the freshman wholeheartedly. The new class members may feel that this last statement isn't quite true, but if they will think back, they will decide that customs did help them adjust to the college and college life.

Each member of the committee has had special distinction among the freshmen: Pete, the super-efficient chairman; Nancy and Anita, his two secretaries who compiled and posted customs jury notices. Jane, a quiet member, did her part; Ron, on the other hand vigorously enforced the customs regulations; Del, the devilish perfectionist, had her frosh well-trained; Denny and Tom Boylan seemed quite stern and business-like, but soon were known to be understanding; Judy, the commuter, kept the day students on their toes; Mike kept the ladies reading their Keys! Finally there was Tom Check who could be softened by a smile and sincere, "I'll try to learn it." These people met once a week as a jury to try customs violators and mete out punishment.

As an innovation for customs, this year a sports contest was held between the frosh and sophs. The frosh lost which meant one more week of dinks, Keys, buttons, and questions!!

It may have seemed like trouble then, but ask any freshman now . . . wasn't it fun?

"Why don't you know the Alma Mater, Frosh?" asks F. Nye as he officiates at Customs Jury.

Camera club

"What's the program for tonight—slides?—a photography demonstration?—a film on color photography technique?" Any one of these projects might be on the agenda of the Camera Club. This small group of students advised by Mr. Amos A. Sharpe admits beginners as well as advanced photography students. Beginning students are shown the basic elements used in printing and enlarging negatives. Advanced shutter bugs experiment in various photo methods such as trick, color, and table top photographies. All members have the use of the darkroom and photo equipment.

Camera Club meetings are held twice a month. This year Betsy Smaltz presented colored slides taken in Germany, Holland, and France. Another special program included Mr. John R. Sawyer who spoke to the group on composition in photography.

This year the group has helped many amateur photographers to get started in this interesting hobby, and many, familiar with the art, have learned new methods.

Camera Clubbers learn that photography is really an art.

Keystone

The KEYSTONE, the school newspaper, is published monthly. The staff labors to make its paper interesting to the students and faculty and a qualified reflection of Kutztown State Teachers College. Progress is an essential element in this publication. Looking forward to coming happenings which broadened the students' outlook on life or added something to the college was an important type of news coverage. Another type of reporting was the review of those happenings which added to the progress of the college and its students.

The editor for this year's KEYSTONE was Nancy Harpel who was ably assisted by Samuel Pizzuto, managing editor; Gail Erwin, news editor; Margaret Lindsay, feature editor; Ronald Horvath, sports editor; and Rebecca Casner, art editor. The business end of the KEYSTONE was taken care of by Leocadia Soponis and Theresa Hadinger. Pat Schucker was in charge of distribution. The photography was done by Marlin Wagner, and Elizabeth Onusconich was staff secretary.

These people and their staff members worked together with Dr. A. M. Tyson, faculty adviser, to provide the students with a fine newspaper.

P. Reinert, G. Erwin, S. Puzzito, C. Obold, R. Horvath, and N. Harpel work at page paste-ups.

Keystonia

Preparing the best yearbook ever was the goal of the 1958 KEYSTONIA staff. This was no easy task, as any member of the staff will testify. The thirty-five members were divided into various departments, each with its own contribution to be made to the publication.

Fred Bartlett served as managing editor until December when, because of illness, he was forced to resign. The Assistant Managing Editor Grace Ann Weaver, was given the editorship, and Frances Plevyak was elected as her assistant.

The staff chose Progress as the theme for the 1958 annual. Looking forward to a brighter and better future seemed an especially appropriate theme for the KEYSTONIA. The staff worked diligently to present this record of campus activities, personalities, and programs.

Many problems were encountered; some, for a time, seemed insuperable. Budgets, layouts, paste-ups, identifying photographs, proofreading, and meeting those ever-present deadlines were just some of the problems which the staff met—and conquered. This work was not done by the staff members alone. Without the patience and understanding of the advisers, Mr. John A. Pawling, Mr. Harold C. Mantz, and Mr. Raymond W. Ford, Jr., the KEYSTONIA itself might have made less progress.

"That's a picture we ought to use," indicates P. Robinson, as C. Workman, C. Kolb, and G. Weaver and he select pictures for the Keystonia.

Science club

The Science Club originated during the school year 1956-57 under the guidance of the head of the science department, Dr. William A. Green. The activities of the group the first year were mainly organizational. As planned the club was to be open to all students of mathematics and science. The purpose of the club is to provide members with the opportunity for discussion, individual research, and extended study in problems related to science not usually taken up in the regular courses of study.

This year the club membership rose to approximately 50. This large turnout gave added stimulus to the program planning. The first meeting featured Dr. Hagen Staack, Muhlenberg College professor who talked on geology. Another meeting featured a film which showed the progress of heart research. The February meeting featured, a representative from Bausch and Lomb Optical Company who showed the progress made in scientific instruments. A field trip was also taken this spring.

The club meets once a month and the last meeting is a dinner meeting. Future plans for the club might include sponsorship of a science fair of other projects which would give added emphasis to science at Kutztown.

The club is new and growing. This year it sent two representatives to a regional gathering of important people in science at Wilkes College, in Wilkes-Barre. Leading the club this year were Reed Maurer, president; Nicholas Tucci, vice-president; Peggy Kirk, secretary; and William Rosch, treasurer.

Science clubbers are engrossed in the demonstration.
